Roger Matura

Time On Earth

No Need for Words

These twelve instrumental pieces highlight the soundscape-character of Matura's new approach. There is a lot of space and calmness in the compositions, which feel atmospheric and free – or, as Matura puts it, "cinemasque".

Rather than once again relying on his signature vintage-sound with plenty of references to the 60s and 70s, Matura was looking for more contemporary impulses this time. Taking Bon Iver as a cue, he spent two years studying the necessary technology.

The music may not seem all that striking, but each new listen reveals more of its gentle beauty - Time on Earth may well be the perfect summary of Matura's creative ambitions.
